With our inheritance of intellectual and educational assets that have been verified and accumulated through over 130 years of higher education for women, we aim to implement internationally educational research that encourages the activity of women. Utilizing the results of 21st-century COE(Center of Excellence) and Global COE, as well as promoting research in the University's unique traditional areas, areas with high research potential, and areas in which the active participation of women is anticipated, we aim to play a role of international educational research center.

In addition, we pour effort into the overseas deployment of teaching staff and students, and proactively move ahead with international cooperation and international contribution.
